A satellite-style image of a large landmass, likely South America, showing a significant portion of the interior and coastal regions that have been exposed due to a sea level drop. The land is depicted in shades of brown and tan, indicating arid or semi-arid terrain. The surrounding ocean is a deep blue, with a prominent turquoise-green band along the coastlines, suggesting shallow water or exposed continental shelves. The overall scene illustrates a dramatic geological event where the sea has receded, exposing vast areas of land.
